MRS. TIMOTHY C. CARTER

THE J. E. JONES LETTER

Mrs. Carter died on the evening of Monday, March 29th, after an illness of almost three years. An illness peculiarly sad and distressing, because in its physical prostration and mental unrest it seemed to do such violence to her gentle spirit. She had so loved freedom and sunny ways. The years as they passed had touched her so lightly. The land brought no blurring of emotions or perceptions, no lessening of vivacity and vitality, no dulling of enthusiasm and interests. One year her lately said "In mind in her inexpressible optimism she was youth incarnate. In spite of years of hardship, sorrow and sacrifice every day seemed to her like a wonderful adventure. There was always "something good" just ahead for us or herself."

Her was a very winning personality. To the attractions of face and bearing there were added an instinctive grace and dignity, an inborn charm of gracefulness, which would have distinguished her in any society.

She had a bright, vivacious mind, ready sympathies, a sparkling wit, which was never barbed, and a never-falling sense of humor, which enlivened her days, and as one of her family has said, "Always carried her over the roughest and hardest going." And all these qualities were but the superstructure of a strong, courageous spirit, which admitted no defeat, and which shouldered sorrows uncomplainingly.

A loyal friend she was to those who sought her, unenvyous, generous, never censorious, tolerant of all frailties, except sham, pretense and meanness of spirit. She wanted happiness for everybody. The passion for the happiness of those around her was one of her outstanding characteristics.

Nature had gifted her with great versatility of talents and appreciative, nothing in the situation that indicated that she could do well. She could never say how anything could be done in a certain line. Official reports of government and of the Federal government

COLONIAL FURNITURE

Mrs. Codidge is said to be an out-and-about advocate of filling the White House with real old colonial furniture.

She wants the mansion filled with genuine antiques, in order to restore the Presidential home to the appearance it had in the days when it was built.

SURPLUS CROPS

According to information in Washington it appears that the Secretary of Agriculture and President Coolidge are giving their support to cooperative farm marketing bills, and that the administration is opposed to measures that provide a way to deal with the excessive surplus question. Strong attempts will

The Wife-SHIP Woman

COMPLICATIONS

SYNOPSIS—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Illinois, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "Old Six Fingers," sees a Native Indian pony dashed to the water against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Illinois to carry the news to Illinois. Brampton meets a old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian, but has threatened him Illinois has threatened to make him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mallett, on their way to Illinois to secure wives from the Indians. The Malletts bring women from France. An old Brampton protects a woman from a serpent's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Damigarde, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidence was used and educated, she is the mother of Brampton. His intentions to prevent the English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. Frenchman, Francois Damiano, slightly demented by stories of native savagery, the riches of the New World, induces himself. Brampton accuses Brampton of treachery, but the latter secures a respite from death by revealing the Natches destination. It was to await the arrival of his foreign companion, Diamond the Fox, who will exonerate or condemn him. Brampton has documents proving Brampton an English spy. Diamond receives a message from Claire telling him to help her search the English settlements. Brampton trusts Narbonne with a note to Claire promising to meet her at New Orleans. He plans his escape. After a terrible struggle, he wrests the torturing hands from Brampton and escapes from Illinois. He meets the Malletts in a waiting racket. At the landing place, he reveals himself as Jean Labrador, whom he needs to bring Claire to him. Brampton questions her closely, but she will tell him little of her history. With Labrador, Brampton and "Old Six" leave in two canoes for the Illinois settlements. Claire turns out to be a creature of moods and a terrible handtrap to a race for life.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

"One must catch the big fish," was the quiet response. "Besides, I placed the wood on the blaze monsieur started. "All the wood?" I sharply demanded.

He brooded at my tone. A tug at my time demanded my attention. After a brief fight I landed a catch.

He waited until I had secured my hook and rolled my line, then she said:

"The wood came to burn?"

"Yes, yes. Not not all at once. A little at a time."

"I was not to know without being told," she said with much dignity. "If monsieur will be explicit another time perhaps I will be better. But wood! La! La! There is nothing but wood. Every one does not have to be sparing of wood in this land."

I hesitated whether to explain the danger of big fires and much smoke.

I started my game on the shore. I gathered nothing and she said that she would not be a finger. Then I said it's time for me and Returning my gaze to the river I was making no progress toward the opposite shore. And only white men, ignorant of the mighty current and barely bold in their own, when easy paddling was to be enjoyed along the shore.

"Now one can hardly see them," she cried.

"We'll go back and cook our fish," I said. The canoe was heading toward us, thus making it appear to be a speak. And I had no doubt the smoke from our generous fire had attracted the voyageurs' attention. If Damiano and his companions were on the same side with us the intervening forest would prevent their seeing the smoke.

It was my motto against mine, and I was hampered by an irresponsible girl-woman.

CHAPTER VIII

What the Smoke Brought, Even if the distant canoe would have thought she was facing a panther. Old Six Fingers, more up than ever, stood leering at her, his yellow snags showing in an ugly grin. On recognizing me he lowered his arm, and with a scowl growled:

"So it's you, is it?"

"Ho, Monsieur Brampton, we meet again!" loudly greeted Narbonne, jungling clear of a grapevine. "Behold, I give you the freedom of my river!
Mademoiselle, command me. I throw myself at your feet."

She rose and seated herself on the log in an effort to recover her dignity, but never allowing her frightened eyes to stray long from the grinning face of Six Fingers.

"Monsieur Narbonne was so good as to do me a service in la Nouvelle Orléans. His presence is always most welcome," she nervously assured the Frenchman.

"We go up the river to find the country of Acadiana, where the diamonds grow on rose-bushes, and the women are almost as beautiful as mademoiselle," grinned Narbonne with a snirk.

"And now we've picked you up well all in convoy," grinned Six Fingers.

And he broke into some of his horrible new doggerel and began chanting:

Heave-ho! And the devil He sits in the air.
Herrah holler for the Spanish main!
Heave-ho! And the red blood From white throats will run!
Herrah!

Narbonne was nearest to him, and with a backhanded sweep he stilled the vicious lips and sent Six Fingers over backward.

Now, I had no desire for either of the two to be traveling ahead of me.
Narbonne would not willingly harm me, but he was eccentric, to say the least. His companion was capable of any infamy if left unwatched.

"But it made a good fire, monsieur
You have said it yourself. I fear you are exercised in your exertions."

"I only mention it because the heavy smoke is drawing the strange canoe to our shore and soon we shall have visitors," I gently explained. "I would have said nothing this time, but I did not want mademoiselle to be taken by surprise, and perhaps, alarmed."

"Nothing that is wrong. Only, this time I asked the wood to be fed on a little at a time. You put it all on at once."

"But it made a good fire, monsieur
You have said it yourself. I fear you are exercised in your exertions."

"I only mention it because the heavy
smoke is drawing the strange canoe
to our shore and soon we shall have visitors," I gently explained. "I would have said nothing this time, but I did not want mademoiselle to be taken by surprise, and perhaps, alarmed."

"This swift country, where the simplest not may bring death," the dramatically whispered.

I smiled reassuringly.

"Hardly death, or we would not be here waiting. It is nothing; these strangers coming. I only mention them so mademoiselle will not be startled."

"You have your market close my your side, so if you faced! I, too, will be ready."

And she poised the clasped disk from her bosom and advanced to hang herself for me. Then as an impulsive act she took the disk and said:

"This is that they have seen the snake in the water that they do not."

"I am assured. If we should disappear they will find the one, and it should go to the water and tell it the dress itself. It would be bad for them to tell each other to follow the one."

"I have your market close my your side, so if you faced! I, too, will be ready."

And Mademoiselle's courage to face. She will not enter she is with me. I will not go."

"I do not understand," she faltered.

"By this time the two can will be ready for our purpose. They still remain extremely. I must get them to the fire to see who they are to make sure they can be taken abroad of us."

"They would you leave the here about."

"She is afraid for the trip to which she does not. As good as they travel, I will be by your side."

"Mademoiselle does not go far away?"

"She does not. We are in this together. I said her."

"Are they enough? Will they trouble us? We are the ones who are up to the game."

"We are a lot. Her was I afraid of pleasure to speak with mademoiselle again. I am in your debt."

The girl now shyly advanced and extended a hand to Narbonne, saying:

"I have the brave Frenchman to thank again."

The absurd fellow was all but kneeling as he reverently kissed the slim hand, his cap gathering more grime from the forest-mold. And I was puzzled to observe how calmly she accepted his homage. She retired to her log, pulling us along after her by the exquisite charm of her manner. It was clear if the babies have followed each other too rapidly and the mother has not had time to regain her strength after nursing one baby before she is called upon to nurse another.

The disease comes on about the time of the first teeth. The child is irritable, has fever and sweating at night and is pale, fussy and puny.

There are hard knobs on the ribs in front, where they join the cartilages.
The head is large and the teeth are slow in appearing and badly formed. The large bones, especially those in the legs, are bent. The child is nervous, irritable and subject to fits.

Much attention has been given to this disease in recent years. It is now known to be due to lack of proper food and especially of sunlight. A rickety child is like a plant which has grown in a dark cellar. Cod liver oil is still used in treating the disease, as it has been for many years, but we know now that the child must have sunlight if its recovery is to be either rapid or complete.

Our local health departments are much interested in rickets, not so much because it has a high death rate by itself, as because the child with rickets is weak and has no ability to resist such diseases as pneumonia and bronchitis. So while few children die of rickets, the death rate among rickety children from colds, pneumonia and bronchitis is far above the normal.

In 1923 the health department of New Haven, Connecticut, decided to try and reduce the amount of rickets among New Haven children. As soon as a birth was reported, a health department nurse was sent to see the mother. As soon as she was able, the mother was asked to bring the baby to the health bureau. There the nurse showed the mother how to give the baby cod liver oil and how to give it a sun bath, beginning by a few minutes sunning of the hands and face, gradually increasing the length and the amount of the exposure until the whole body was exposed for an hour a day.

Experience for three years now has shown that, simply by sunlight and cod liver oil, rickets can be controlled and practically prevented.

such black thoughts from your mind," she murmured. "Of course I have no fear when you two are with me."

To me her fear of Six Fingers was incomprehensible. He was only a small older of a man, who could do no mischief beyond hurling a knife and gulling brutes.

Narbonne surrendered his purpose of seeking Six Fingers and putting him to the sword, and said:

"The old thief goes with me to the land of Acadiana, where his pirate's soul can revel over hills of gold. He will not discommode mademoiselle.
We two will push on ahead."

I feared for Six Fingers' treacherous old tongue if he fell in with Damiano.
It was not my plan to have him ahead of me, spreading the news of our coming.

"Our ways, monsieur, are the same for many leagues," I said. "It is my wish that you and your companion travel to our company."

With a side glance I directed the girl to second the invitation. She returned my look rather dazedly, but was warm and gracious in adding:

"I also not it. You will not refuse me, monsieur?"

"God pity a madness which would persuade me to refuse you, mademoiselle," he plausibly exclaimed. "Now we will take the creature from the brandy, or the king of Acadiana will go with a dry throat. It is incredible, monsieur, the amount of drink that withered old man can hold."

"Of course you do not really believe there is any land called Acadiana?"

"No Acadiana? Impossible!"

"There is no such land, monsieur.
I have been through the regions of the Falls of St. Anthony where I located the water that the one. The water makes a big loop. My she comes with it, I believe, follow the main channel. There is a small bay, or creek, not more than six feet wide and entirely choked with drift at the open end. If you reach that opening and cross the loop I will give a day to the water. I plan to get to the water and tell it the dress itself. It would be bad for them to tell each other to follow the one."

"Mademoiselle," he muttered, wiping his forehead. "Is there anything true about this country?"

"All you have seen is true. It can be no worse than the Great Lakes in the north. Wild woods and beasts. No diseases. No gout or sciatica are found.

"No gout or sciatica. No place where the Indians are anything but Indians. No land of plenty until you cross the great plain and reach the great ocean."

"Another weak spot is the region of the back low down over the kidneys.
Many a boxer has been slowly worn down and put out without a mark on his face by repeated kidney punches.
Everybody knows how tanky Bob Fitzsimmons fought Jim Corbett by the famous solar plexus blow."

"Some parts of the body are much more subject to injury than others. Out of 300,000 accidents of all kinds, 25 per cent were injuries to the arm and hand, 28 per cent to the leg and foot, 22 per cent to the trunk and 9 per cent to the head."

TRANSJORDANIA AWAKENING

Arabs of the Desert in Their City Costumes.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

RECENT reports show that now that the Wahabis of central Arabia have gained control of the kingdom of the Hejaz with the holy cities Mecca and Medina, and the port of Jeddah, they are turning their attention to the surrounding Arabian states. Bands of Wahabis have appeared in Transjordan, which may presage the contest of that region and the exile of Emir Abdallah to his cooler hills and open plains.

Another name for Transjordan is the Emirate of Kerak. Geographically it is easy to locate—it is an area almost as large as the state of Maryland, lying along the River Jordan and the Syrian desert. Politically Transjordan's affairs have been highly complicated ever since the arms race to the borderland of French and British influence, feeling the naval and Mesopotamia, she has awakened with a jolt from her age-long tranquility.

Perhaps it will bring the newly independent but very old country closer to Americans to realize that its capital, now Amman was once Philadelphia—the great-great-grandfather of the half-dozen or more Philadelphia, great and small, that are to be found in our postal guides. But it was only a mere matter of twenty-one centuries ago that the city took the name Philadelphia from its new lord, Ptolemy Philadelphia. It had existed as Rabbath Ammon, chief city of the Ammonites, almost from the days of Lot, from whom the Ammonites are said to have sprung. It was after a victorious battle with these same people of Ammon that Jephthah, according to the Biblical story, returned to the fatal meeting with his daughter, Country Not All Desert.

When Transjordan is described as stretching from the Jordan and the Dead sea toward the interior of Arabia, one is likely to call up the picture of a hopeless desert. But much of the region is steep land, a high plain supporting some flocks and even tilling. Nomads have long held the region in its grip, however, and it is as a sort of "chief of no man's land" that Abdallah bin Hussein has found it necessary to rule. He holds his "court" in a palace but in a group of tents which he moves with the seasons.

This land is now given over largely to canals, is capable of development along stable lines, as shown by its past importance. After Alexander's eastern conquests the cities to the east of the Jordan became Hellenized and the seats of prosperity and culture. In the Second century before Christ Ptolemy Philadelphia built in the city which was given his name an extensive acropolis which in the Amman of today is only a mass of fallen columns.

Rome's sway over Philadelphia is shown in Amman by the ruins of a huge amphitheater which seated 7,000 spectators. In the sleepy eastern town of today goats browse among the foundations of temples and public buildings. Arabian coffee shops lean against once-pride walls, and the eastern spires of the village lounge litters on overturned marble pillars. Emir Abdallah has shown some interest in the ancient structures of his capital, however, by having the fally wall-preserved amphitheater cleared of debris.

Jordan Always Barter.

The Jordan is a small river, like hundreds across which modern trade deals with scarcely a rumble to mark their passage, but it has separated Transjordan and western Palestine from the time of Moses till today.

Transjordan is the home of pastoralists, where Arab tents, long symbols of transitory residence, have pastured white rich Roman ruins, once the gathering places of cultured crowds, have disappeared; where the desert, which to so many signifies death, has furnished a welcome haven to many to whom the narrow Jordan seems an impassable gulf.

To civilization the deepest and swiftest river is only an incident; but the

Our Anniversary is the greatest sale event of the entire year in Northern New England. A mere announcement of its date is sufficient to bring the shoppers in throngs—many from distant points to share in the wonderful savings it affords.

And now these 8 wonderful days are here again—8 days in which every department offers extraordinary values in new things for women, for men, for children, for the home.

This year the sale marks our 20th milestone. So we are dedicating it to our friends and customers who have made it possible for us to enjoy 20 years of steady, uninterrupted growth. And we know of no better way to show our appreciation than by planning the best anniversary sale values in the history of the store.

Sale Prices are remarkably low—but back of every offering stands the famous P. M. & B. guarantee of quality which insures satisfaction in everything you buy. It is the RIGHT KIND of a sale, for it offers BIG SAVINGS on the RIGHT KIND of merchandise.

Read this page! It will give you an idea of how wonderfully you can save on every Spring and Summer need! Even though you must come many miles, it will pay you to attend the sale, for there is no sale like a P. M. & B. anniversary.

PORTLAND, MAINEThe Static in ChristianityBy REV. J. H. RALSTON, D. D.
Dean of the Correspondence School, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.TEXT.—But that which ye have already hold fast till I come.—Rev. 2:25.The word "static" has been used by more than one prominent modernist in a derivative way as applying to what conservatives or evangelicals in the church hold—a static position, no movement forward.
In considering Christianity several of its aspects are before us—its past, its present and its future. All that the church has to day is given in the past. It now has a great deposit, and it has hopes for the future.This derivative use of the word "static" is in connection with Christian truth. The change is that the church will not look forward to new truth. Taking the derision out of the word, the statement is true. Christianity simply rests on what it has received and uses it not only for the present but believes that its proper use will make the best provision for the future. Those who are now cultivating new truth are not slow to say that they have an object, something they are driving at, and it is nothing else than a revolution. They are determined to change the beliefs of men as to God, Jesus Christ, the Bible, sin, salvation and the things of the hereafter.Now, what is the church to do with what has been given to it? While it may be admitted that it has something given to it by history and in its experience, what it has, has been given to it by revelation from God in the Bible. It is not difficult to get a comprehensive view of what it possesses.Besides the Bible has been the subject of interpretation for nearly two thousand years, and in the course of these centuries there has been a certain deposit of what may be called faith. Asking different bodies of Christians who hold that deposit for language in which to express it, it will be found that the language differs slightly, emphasis not being put at the same places. However, this difference is often sufficient to cause Christians to form different communions, thus accounting for the various historical confessions. But, take out one of a half dozen of these formulations of belief, eliminate the few points of real difference between it and the others, and you will find that the residue of one will correspond quite accurately with that of every other and the essential will include the supernatural being of God, the true deity of Jesus Christ, the supreme authority of the Bible, the new birth by regeneration of the Holy Spirit, the oneness of believers, the return of the Lord Jesus Christ, the resurrection of all men, the judgments, and eternal future rewards and punishments. The exhortation of our text is that we hold this great deposit fast.The holding fast of that which has been received is not an easy task. In the first place those holding it should quite clearly know what they are holding. On the part of the evangelical portion of the truth a new study of the fundamentals of faith is demanded. Most of the confessions of the churches will splendidly repay new reading and study. Divinity schools should again return to the simple teaching of the Bible and confessional Christianity. Not only should evangelical Christians thus renew study, but preachers and teachers should put new emphasis on the great doctrines of faith.Still further, holding these things means battle. Timothy and others of the first centuries were told that they should hold the faith, the most faith, and with a good warfare. Nothing religious tempts us to give up the faith of our Lord, but a small part of mankind, but when the Word of the Lord is in the hearts of men, it can be done.
The attorney of God is to continue holding the cause of truth and defeating the forces of evil.In the meantime we must do the best we can to the cause of the truth, despite the scoffing of the world.
But we do the best things of this life, and the life that has come to us from God, and we must do the best we can to the cause of the truth.
We must do the best we can to the cause of the truth, and we must do the best we can to the cause of the truth.God Has So Willed But we do the best things of this
from God, and we must do the best
we can to the cause of the truth.
We must do the best we can to
the cause of the truth, and we must do the best we can to the cause of the truth.Whenever We Meet Him What can love human to love the love in the heart, but in the heart What Jesus knew of God, and in the heart of man, we can do the best we can to the cause of the truth.
Him, and we can do the best we can to the cause of the truth, and we can do the best we can to the cause of the truth.

A Sad Experience

When you step out to buy a tire—and much as we hate to do it, it's got to be done every once in a while—what do you want?Of course, you'd like to rub a lamp, or make a wish, or have some good fairy appear, and slip a nice new tire on the rim for nothing.

But, unfortunately, these things only happen in our dreams.

What you want is a tire that will get you back on the road again and keep you going for a long, long time.So, as long as you've got to buy a tire, you want something good and you want it at the right price.The next time you are up against the sad necessity of buying a tire—call us up and we'll sell you a Goodyear and make you glad to buy it.

BACK BAD TODAY?

There's little rest or peace for the backache sufferer.

Days are tired and weary—Nights bring no respite.

Urinary troubles, headaches, dizziness and nervousness, all tend to prevent rest or sleep.

Why continue to be so miserable?
Why not use a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys?

Use Doan's Pills.

Your neighbors recommend Doan's.

Read this Bethel case:

T. L. Luxton, Main St., West, says:

"I was doing heavy work hauling wood and the lifting put a strain on my back and kidneys. I had a dull ache in my back for days that made me feel mighty tired. Mornings my back was so stiff and lame, I could hardly get my shoes on. My kidneys were weak and disordered and I had to get up each night to pass the secretions. After passing four boxes of Doan's Pills, I was cured of kidney disorder."

Q. Upon your own statement you at least technically, committed forgery, be cause you had no authority to draw upon another person's bank account or sign another person's name without a proper arrangement being made to do so advance. Evidently you meant no wrong. Nevertheless, you violated the law and it is plainly up to you to adjust the matter with the treasurer of your church society in a friendly way such as becomes good Christians. In a commercial matter this might have been a serious affair, and you have no doubt been taught a good lesson by your experience. I am sorry I cannot say a single word to justify your action, and the only excuse you have is that you meant no wrong.

Q. Can a design for postal cards, in-itation cards, congratulatory cards, etc., be copyrighted, and who are the reputable firms making souvenir postal cards, valentines, etc. J. C. G.

The short cut for you is to write to the Register of Copyrights, Washington, D. C., and ask for blanks upon which to make application, stating briefly what kind of copyright you do not. The blanks are different in the case of books as contrasted with those of photographs, etc., but the law does not cover such matters as invitation cards, congratulatory cards, and similar devices which differ only in the use of words from the forms in general use.

As for names of manufacturers and printers, they are to be found in prints of the forms in general use.

Q. What is the meaning of the names of two Republics of South America,

Paraguay, and Uruguay? N. M. B.

Both these Republics are named for rivers; Paraguay means the golden water; Uruguay means the river of waters, referring to the numerous tributaries.

Q. What is the comparison in the length of miles of the Atlantic Coast line with the Pacific Coast line? L. K.

The United States Atlantic Coast line is 1,773 nautical miles and the Pacific coast line, 1,671 nautical miles. The Gulf coast is 1,697 nautical miles.

Q. What can I use to remove ink stains from a concrete porch? A. R. E.

Apply a solution of oxalic acid, and as soon as stain is removed apply ammonia water.

Q. What is meant by a "pica emin" measurement in printing? H. G. R.

The Government Printing Office says that one pica em measures .165 of an inch, which is the standard decided upon by the United States Typefounders' Association in 1886, and now adopted by all American typefounders. Six pica em is equal to one inch less than 1 inch.

Q. Please give the definitions for Feudalism, crusades and renaissance. J. T.

Feudalism pertains to the feudal system, or its principles, relations, or usages.

The feudal system, the system of polity in Europe in the Middle Ages, based on the relation of lord to vassal, and with the holding of land in feud. Reference to the crusades means any of the seven (some say nine) of the military expeditions undertaken between 1096 and 1270 by Christian powers to recover the Holy Land from the Mohammedans. By the renaissance is meant, specifically, the revival from the 14th to the 16th centuries of classical art and learning in Europe, marking the transition from medieval to modern times. It also means the style of art which then prevailed.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

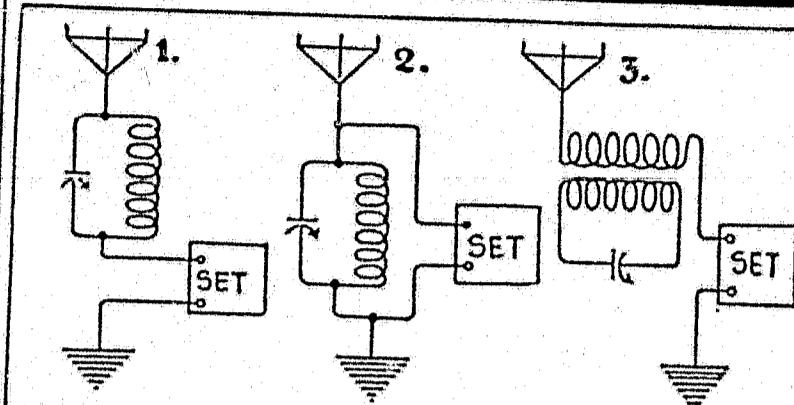

Mrs. Annie Kwienski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Making the Receiver Selective—Three Methods of Connecting the Wave Trap Are Shown in the Diagram.

Selectivity, this is the battle cry that has taken the place of the watchword distance, for of what use is a set that is able to tune in the Pacific coast stations if it can't tune out the nearby locals. In the old days of not so long ago when all broadcasting was done on 400 or 300 meters, 500 watts was considered super-power, the sharp tuning qualities of a receiver were not very important factors in its construction. Now, however, come requests for information on how to tune out XYZ while ABC is on, how to tune out the locals and how to separate the locals.

If you have a manufactured five or more tube set that does not tune sharply there is little you can do to remedy it. Any good five-tube set employing two stages of tuned R. F. should be able to separate and tune out local stations that are not closer than 20 meters. If your set does not do this it is either not efficient or you are using an aerial that is too long. With a five-tube set you can use a much shorter aerial than one would suppose, and still get comfortable long-speaker reception on most of the larger stations within 1,000 miles.

Cut Through Interference.

It is from the owners of the bloopers, the two, three and four-element receivers that most of the complaints regarding non-selectivity come. For them we can suggest the wave trap, and if it is made with care and of low-resistance parts the user will be able to cut his path through interference with greater ease.

Wave traps in general are of two kinds: Those that are shunted across the antenna and ground and called "acceptors" and those that are in series with the antenna and ground and called "rejectors." A rejector prevents one frequency from getting into the receiver and lets all others pass. It cuts a slice out of the stations that are on the air. An acceptor provides a convenient bypass for all frequencies but the one that the listener desires to hear.

Converting Into Wavemeter.

A wave trap, besides its use as a filter, can be conveniently converted into a wave meter by calibrating it in wave lengths. It need only be placed near one of the coils of the receiving set to indicate the frequency of the incoming signals. When the wave trap condenser is turned a sharp decrease in signal strength for the non-regenerative receiver will be noted, and a click will be noted with an oscillating receiver when the wave trap is in consonance with the circuit of the receiving set. By calibrating the condenser settings from a few of the well-known broadcasting stations a curve may be drawn showing the relation between the condenser settings and the wave length at the various dial readings.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

FOREFATHERS OF RADIO

By GEORGE LEWIS
of The Crosley Radio Corporation.

In 1857, Heinrich Hertz, a German physicist, conducted the experiments which resulted in scientists accepting Maxwell's theory of electromagnetic waves as a fact, and in engineers developing the practical use of these waves in radio.

As the story goes, Hertz was experimenting with some apparatus for vibrating electric current in the sparking apparatus and picked up by the little coil of wire. It is not difficult to understand that a vibrating current might send out waves when one considers analogies. When you drop a board into a pond of water, it splashes up and down and sends out waves. When you pound a drum, the tightly-stretched drumhead vibrates and sends out sound waves into the air.

A Battery Brief

To have a battery working at its best efficiency, the terminals should be kept free from corrosion, a scale which is formed by the electrolyte or acid. To get rid of it, scrape the terminals until there is a bright lead finish. Washing the terminals with ammonia or some other alkaline solution will neutralize any acid that may be present and prevent corrosion. Take care that none of this solution gets into the battery, as it will neutralize the acid in the battery and also stop its action.

For Perfect Contact

Any electrical connection depends for its efficiency on positive contact of the various metallic parts. Wires that are fastened to terminals should be thoroughly cleaned and then properly soldered.

ETHER WAVES

Adding new electrolyte does not charge a storage battery. A cloth dampened in ammonia will keep the top of the storage battery clean.

With proper care a vacuum tube should give from 300 to 1,000 hours service.

A great many parts of a set can be bought cheaper than an amateur can make them. Input to every tube goes to grid and filament, usually negative filament or center arm of potentiometer. The efficiency of a storage battery is measured by the ratio of an output to the input, generally in successive hours.

If paste wax is used for soldering, it must be removed thoroughly with a cloth, so that it will not creep along the wires, and break down in solution.

Reverse the leads on the grid coil if signals are mushy and stations hard to get.

Thirty amperes hour capacity means that if one ampere is drawn from a cell every hour it will last 30 hours. A loop antenna is supposed to intercept maximum signal strength when it is pointed toward the transmitter, but this directional property is due to electromagnetic waves sent out by the surroundings.

Heinrich Rudolf Hertz.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

For those who like the old-fashioned buttermilk soup, the following will be enjoyed:

Mulled Buttermilk—Take five cupsful of buttermilk, stir a tablespoonful of flour into a little of the buttermilk, add and cook until boiling hot. Season with cinnamon, sugar or nutmeg.

Kidney Beans With

Sour Cream—Cook the beans until tender, then add sour cream to moisten thoroughly. Place over a slow fire and simmer one hour. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Orange and Water Cress Salad—

Arrange a nice bed of water cress on a salad plate, arrange overlapping slices of orange and serve with French dressing. Very nice to serve with game.

Baked Onions and Cheese—Parboil half a dozen medium-sized onions until nearly tender. Drain and put them into a baking dish, then cover with a layer of white sauce and a sprinkling of good sharp cheese, repeat and finish the top with a layer of buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown.

Brown Nut Bread—Take two cups of graham flour, one cupful of wheat flour, one-half cupful of molasses, one tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of raisins, and one and one-half cupfuls of walnut meats. Mix and bake in a moderate oven.

Mock Crab—Melt four tablespoonsfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of flour, one and one-half teaspoonsfuls of salt, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of mustard, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. When well blended pour in gradually while stirring constantly, one and one-half cupfuls of scalded milk. Bring to the boiling point and add one cup of cornstarch, one egg lightly beaten, three tablespoonsfuls of worcestershire sauce. Turn into a buttered dish, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until brown.

Onion Sandwich—Chop a small onion, add salt, pepper, a little vinegar and oil and spread on buttered bread.

Split Pea Soup—Soak a cupful of split peas in two quarts of water. In the morning put the peas over the fire with a ham bone or pieces of salt pork, a slice of onion, and simmer for four hours. Rub through a sieve, return to the fire; melt two tablespoonsfuls of butter, add two of flour, mix well and add a little soup to the consistency of porridge. Stir into the soup and cook five to ten minutes. Season with salt, pepper and add one cupful of thin cream just at serving time.

Timely Dishes.

A good salad is always appreciated and a good salad is one which is dressed with a tasty dressing.

Lettuce With Egg Salad—Put crisp head lettuce cut into quarters on salad plates after being well chilled in cold water and drained. Take hard-cooked eggs and put the yolks through a ricer; chop the whites very fine. Pour highly seasoned French dressing over the lettuce and sprinkle with the whites and yolks. This makes a pretty salad to carry out the color scheme of yellow.

Pear Salad—Set half a canned pear on a few heart leaves of lettuce. Sprinkle with a few cubes of Neufchâtel cheese and half as many strips of pimento. Take one cupful of double cream, two tablespoonsfuls of lemon juice, four tablespoonsfuls of the pear syrup, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and four tablespoonsfuls of honey. Beat the dressing until light and pour over the salad.

Caramel Cornstarch Pudding—Take two tablespoonsfuls of cornstarch, mix and cook with one pint of milk. Put three-fourths of a cupful of brown sugar in a smooth frying pan, melt and stir until dissolved and a golden brown, then off the heat add cornstarch mixture. Stir until all the sugar is well treated with the pudding, add a pinch of salt and serve in sherbet cups with whipped cream.

Chinamen Rolls—Take two cupfuls of light bread dough, add one-half cupful of sugar, four tablespoonsfuls of shortening, cut in the mixture until well blended. Roll out, using flour to handle, then spread with butter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, roll up and cut into small rings. Place to rise on a baking sheet, dust with brown sugar just before baking.

Spring Salad—Slice crisp red radishes very thin, mix sliced green onions and a little chopped green pepper.

Season with a mayonnaise dressing.

Tomatoes and Tomato Juice are invaluable aids in the diet of young or old. Use the fresh tomatoes, canned or the juice—all good for children.

Dishes made entirely from milk, fat, meat, picnics and eggs with meat substitutes form the most important group in a well-balanced ration. Then come cereals, breads, fats, of which butter is the most important.
